

NURSING HOME and REHABILITATION FACILITIES

*Prior to choosing a nursing home or rehab facility it is important to do your research. Through Medicare's website, "Nursing Home Compare" was created that allows individuals to compare information, quality of care and staffing for all Medicare and Medicaid participating nursing homes. Nursing Home Compare has a five star quality rating system. You are also able view NYS Department of Health's inspection findings and deficiencies. For more information and to compare nursing home facilities go to: www.medicare.gov/NHCompare.

Definitions:

Acute rehabilitation services include but are not limited to Physical, Occupational, Speech therapy for individuals suffering from an illness or injury. In most cases, Acute rehab is a relatively short stay, for higher level functioning individuals who can tolerate more intensified therapy. Therapists and a discharge planner will work with you to develop a treatment and discharge plan.

Sub-acute rehabilitation services include but are not limited to Physical, Occupational, Speech therapy for individuals suffering from an illness or injury. Individuals have a longer rehab stay than in an acute care setting. Rehab stays vary depending on the individual's ailment and recovery time. Sub-acute rehab is mostly for lower level functioning or frail individuals who cannot tolerate intensified therapy. Therapists and a discharge planner will work with you to develop a treatment and discharge plan.

Respite services provide relief to caregivers and/or family members caring for a loved one. Respite can include a short term stay in a nursing home and/or assisted living facility. The facility can provide oversight, supervision, medical care and personal care to the individual who is in need. Respite is used for caregivers and/or family members to be able to take a break from their caregiving duties in order to prevent burnout. For more information, call the desired facility directly to speak further about respite availability and accommodations.
